

ASCR International
9810 Patuxent Woods Drive, Suite K
Columbia, MD 21046

Contact: Mr. James Sandone, WLS
Delaware County Fire
Restoration/Janitorial Services
PO Box 74
Glenolden, PA 19036-0074

Sandone Earns Restoration Industry Recognition

Glenolden, PA, June, 2006 – Mr. James Sandone, WLS of Delaware County Fire Restoration/Janitorial Services was recently recognized by the Association of Specialists in Cleaning and Restoration (ASCR), as a Water Loss Specialist® (WLS), a select group of individuals holding the water loss industry's foremost certification. The induction ceremony was held in March during ASCR's 61st Annual Convention & Exhibition in Savannah, Georgia.

The Water Loss Specialist designation is the preeminent recognition offered by ASCR to water loss professionals. In order to qualify for this credential, individuals completed extensive educational requirements to meet professional competency standards and demonstrated the highest quality of services available.

The WLS candidates were also required to prepare a formal report on an approved subject, pass a rigorous exam which demonstrated their knowledge in this area, and to formalize their commitment to the ASCR and Restoration Council Code of Ethics.

###

The Association of Specialists in Cleaning and Restoration (ASCR), located in Columbia, Maryland, is the only international trade association in the cleaning and restoration industry. Its more than 1,100 national and international member firms specialize in cleaning, treating, and repairing damaged buildings and their contents. Three Institutes comprise ASCR: the Environmental Institute, the Restoration Institute, and the Textile Institute. More information is available on the ASCR website: www.ascr.org.